About Amanda:

A native of the Chicago area, Amanda moved to Nashville where she received a Bachelor of Music in Classical Oboe Performance and Music Therapy from Belmont University. While at Belmont, Amanda served as the oboe section leader for the Belmont Wind Ensemble and Belmont Symphony Orchestra. She performed as a soloist with the Belmont Chamber Strings Orchestra, Belmont choirs, and on several student's recitals.

Since then, Amanda, has taught a variety of private music lessons and, as a Board-Certified Music Therapist, has led both individual and group music therapy sessions with adults and children with intellectual disabilities, older adults in nursing homes, adults in a psychiatric hospital, and children in a pediatric hospital. She specializes in teaching oboe, piano, guitar, ukulele and adaptive music lessons. Her oboe students have found success in making Middle Tennessee's Midstate bands. Amanda has also taught recreational classes in local Nashville neighborhoods and at Gymboree Play and Music. In her free time, Amanda enjoys spending time with family and friends, reading, and making music.
